

AP Biology - Chapter 3 Cellular Respiration Assignment

- What is the relationship between anaerobic and aerobic biology?
 Anaerobic means "without oxygen" and aerobic means "with oxygen". Anaerobic respiration is the breakdown of glucose into pyruvate, and aerobic respiration is the breakdown of pyruvate into carbon dioxide and water. Anaerobic respiration is used by some organisms, such as yeast, to produce energy in the absence of oxygen. Aerobic respiration is used by most organisms, including humans, to produce energy in the presence of oxygen.
- What does an electron transport chain and what is the difference between a lowering and maximum electron potential?
 An electron transport chain is a series of protein complexes in the inner mitochondrial membrane that transfer electrons from one molecule to another. The difference between a lowering and maximum electron potential is the difference in the energy levels of the electrons. The maximum electron potential is the energy level of the electrons when they are at their highest energy state, and the lowering electron potential is the energy level of the electrons when they are at their lowest energy state.
- Describe the process and purpose of cell respiration.
 Cell respiration is the process by which cells convert glucose and oxygen into carbon dioxide and water, releasing energy in the form of ATP. The purpose of cell respiration is to provide the cell with the energy it needs to carry out its various functions.
- Explain prokaryotic cell division - binary fission and budding.

- What is surface area to volume ratio and importance of it as it applies to the biological world?
 The surface area to volume ratio is the ratio of the surface area of an object to its volume. This ratio is important in biology because it affects the rate at which substances can enter and leave a cell. A higher surface area to volume ratio allows for a greater exchange of materials with the environment, which is essential for the survival of the cell.
