

MARIEB CHAPTER 14: THE AUTONOMIC NERVOUS SYSTEM

I. Overview of the Autonomic nervous system

A. Comparison of the somatic and autonomic nervous systems (Fig. 14.1)

1. Effectors

- a. Somatic: skeletal muscle
- b. Autonomic: smooth muscle, cardiac muscle, glands

2. Efferent Pathways and Ganglia (note slight differences here and in packet)

- a. Somatic: cell bodies of motor neurons are in CNS and their axons extend all the way to the muscles they innervate. Axons are thick and heavily myelinated (fast).
- b. Autonomic: motor unit is a two neuron chain;
Preganglionic neuron: first neuron, cell body in CNS. The preganglionic axon synapses with the second motor neuron. Axon thin and lightly myelinated.

Postganglionic neuron: second motor neuron, cell body outside CNS (makes up ganglia), axon extends to effector organ. Axon unmyelinated and thin (slow).

3. Neurotransmitter Effect

- a. Somatic: All somatic motor neurons release ACh at their synapses with skeletal muscles.
- b. Autonomic neurotransmitters released by the postganglionic axon into visceral effector organs:

Acetylcholine: released by parasympathetic fibers

Norepinephrine & Epinephrine: released by sympathetic fibers

Autonomic Nervous System He Ji-Ye,Zheng Xin-Feng,Jiang Lei-Sheng,2013-11-11 Bone remodeling is thought to be regulated by many factors including nutritional status humoral factors and biomechanical stress However the involvement of the autonomic nervous system mainly the sympathetic nervous system SNS in the modulation of bone remodeling is beginning to receive more attention Neural innervation of bone has been demonstrated Both experimental and clinical evidence has indicated the involvement of autonomic nervous system regulation in bone metabolism The sympathetic neural pathway is so far the only identified link between the potent leptin dependent central control and bone cells An intact autonomic nervous system contributes to the maintenance of healthy bone tissue Conversely disturbance of the autonomic nervous system could induce abnormal bone remodeling In this chapter we review current knowledge about the role of the autonomic nervous system in abnormal bone formation and its association with clinical diseases such as heterotopic ossification ossification of the posterior longitudinal ligament postmenopausal osteoporosis adolescent idiopathic scoliosis complex regional pain syndrome Charcot neuro osteoarthropathy unloading induced osteoporosis central or peripheral nervous system damage and depression induced osteoporosis Understanding the mechanism of sympathetic neural signaling in bone remodeling may shed light on a potential treatment avenue for the prevention or reversal of bone loss

Autonomic Nervous System Ruud M. Buijs, 2013-11-11 The overarching theme of the present chapter is the importance of the interaction between brain and body in order to maintain homeostasis an interaction rather than a mere top down or reflex regulation as signals from the organs may influence the functioning of the brain For example the reflex regulation of blood pressure and heart rate is not only subject to modulation by ascending information from the body but also by descending information from several areas in hypothalamus and cortex The central nervous system CNS has the capacity to control its output via the autonomic nervous system ANS using an amazing differentiation For example not only do the biological clock and prefrontal cortex contain neurons which influence the parasympathetic or sympathetic motor neurons they also contain different neurons that project to diverse body compartments In the end this leads to integrated responses whereby visceral sensory information reaches higher centers in the CNS via vagal or spinal sensory pathways causing a reaction which takes into account factors such as the time of day the season the reproductive status mood Based on all this information the brain sets the balance of the different parts of the ANS causing its output to change its emphasis according to the situation A disturbed balance either as a result of behavior or of disease of any of the organs may lead to pathology affecting the functioning of the entire individual
