

Chapter 51

Animal Behavior

- A behavior is an action carried out by muscles under control of the Nervous system
- Behavior is subject to natural selection
- Niko Tinbergen identified four questions that should be asked about animal behavior
 - 1. What stimulus elicits the behavior, and what physiological mechanisms mediate the response?
 - 2. How does the animal's experience during growth and development influence the response?
 - 3. How does the behavior aid survival and reproduction?
 - 4. What is the behavior's evolutionary history?
- Behavioral ecology is the study of the ecological and evolutionary basis for animal behavior
 - Behavioral ecology integrates proximate and ultimate explanations for animal behavior
 - Proximate causation addresses "how" a behavior occurs or is modified, including Tinbergen's questions 1 and 2
 - Ultimate causation addresses "why" a behavior occurs in the context of natural selection, including Tinbergen's questions 3 and 4

Fixed Action Patterns

- A fixed action pattern is a sequence of unlearned acts directly linked to a simple stimulus
- Fixed action patterns are unchangeable and, once initiated, usually carried to completion
- A fixed action pattern is triggered by an external cue known as a sign stimulus
 - Tinbergen observed male stickleback fish responding to a passing red truck
 - In male stickleback fish, the stimulus for attack behavior is the red underside of an intruder

Living machines Tony J. Prescott, Nathan Lepora, Paul F. M. J. Verschure, 2018-04-13 Contemporary research in science and engineering is seeking to harness the versatility and sustainability of living organisms By exploiting natural principles researchers hope to create new kinds of technology that are self repairing adaptable and robust and to invent a new class of machines that are perceptive social emotional perhaps even conscious This is the realm of the living machine Living machines can be divided into two types biomimetic systems that harness the principles discovered in nature and embody them in new artifacts and biohybrid systems in which biological entities are coupled with synthetic ones Living Machines A handbook of research in biomimetic and biohybrid systems surveys this flourishing area of research capturing the current state of play and pointing to the opportunities ahead Promising areas in biomimetics include self organization biologically inspired active materials self assembly and self repair learning memory control architectures and self regulation locomotion in air on land or in water perception cognition control and communication Drawing on these advances the potential of biomimetics is revealed in devices that can harvest energy grow or reproduce and in animal like robots that range from synthetic slime molds to artificial fish to humanoids Biohybrid systems is a relatively new field with exciting and largely unknown potential but one that is likely to shape the future of humanity This book surveys progress towards new kinds of biohybrid such as robots that merge electronic neurons with biological tissue micro scale machines made from living cells prosthetic limbs with a sense of touch and brain machine interfaces that allow robotic devices to be controlled by human thought The handbook concludes by exploring some of the impacts that living machine technologies could have on both society and the individual exploring questions about how we will see and understand ourselves in a world in which the line between the natural and the artificial is increasingly blurred With contributions from leading researchers from science engineering and the humanities this handbook will be of broad interest to undergraduate and postgraduate students Researchers in the areas of computational modeling and engineering including artificial intelligence machine learning
