

Chapter 5 : Polynomial Functions

In this chapter we are going to take a more in depth look at polynomials. We've already solved and graphed second degree polynomials (i.e. quadratic equations/functions) and we now want to extend things out to more general polynomials. We will take a look at finding solutions to higher degree polynomials and how to get a rough sketch for a higher degree polynomial.

We will also be looking at Partial Fractions in this chapter. It doesn't really have anything to do with graphing polynomials but needed to be put somewhere and this chapter seemed like as good a place as any.

Section 5.2 : Zeroes/Roots Of Polynomials

We'll start off this section by defining just what a root or zero of a polynomial is.

Section 5.3 : Graphing Polynomials

In this section we are going to look at a method for getting a rough sketch of a general polynomial. The only real information that we're going to need is a complete list of all the zeroes (including multiplicity) for the polynomial.

In this section we are going to either be given the list of zeroes or they will be easy to find. In the next section we will go into a method for determining a large portion of the list for most polynomials. We are graphing first since the method for finding all the zeroes of a polynomial can be a little long and we don't want to obscure the details of this section in the mess of finding the zeroes of the polynomial.

Section 5.4 : Finding Zeroes Of Polynomials

We've been talking about zeroes of polynomial and why we need them for a couple of sections now. We haven't, however, really talked about how to actually find them for polynomials of degree greater than two. That is the topic of this section. Well, that's kind of the topic of this section. In general, finding all the zeroes of any polynomial is a fairly difficult process. In this section we will give a process that will find all rational (i.e. integer or fractional) zeroes of a polynomial. We will be able to use the process for finding all the zeroes of a polynomial provided all but at most two of the zeroes are rational. If more than two of the zeroes are not rational then this process will not find all of the zeroes.

Section 5.5 : Partial Fractions

This section doesn't really have a lot to do with the rest of this chapter, but since the subject needs to be covered and this was a fairly short chapter it seemed like as good a place as any to put it.
