

Chapter 32 – Electrostatics

32.1 Electricity

1. What does it mean for a rod to be “electrically charged”?

Electrostatics is the branch of physics that deals with electric charges that are at rest. When a rod is charged, it means that it has a net electric charge. This charge can be either positive or negative, depending on the type of material used to create the charge. The charge is distributed throughout the rod, and it can be transferred to other objects.

2. Why does the ground become “grounded” for the rest of the lesson? How does grounding work electrically?

The ground is considered to be a reservoir of electric charges. It is a large conductor that can accept or donate electrons. When a charged object is connected to the ground, the excess charge is transferred to the ground, and the object becomes neutral.

32.2 Electric Charges

1. Which part of an atom is positively charged, and which is part is negatively charged?

The protons in the nucleus are positively charged, and the electrons are negatively charged.

2. How does the charge of one electron compare with the charge of another electron? How does it compare with the charge of a proton?

The charge of one electron is equal in magnitude to the charge of one proton, but opposite in sign. The charge of a proton is positive, and the charge of an electron is negative.

3. What is the smallest charge of an electron?

The smallest charge of an electron is 1.6×10^{-19} C.

32.3 Conservation of Charge

1. What is a positive rod? Is negative rod?

A positive rod is a rod that has a net positive charge. A negative rod is a rod that has a net negative charge. The charge is distributed throughout the rod, and it can be transferred to other objects.
