PLAYING DEAD SPACE 2

HUD

Dead Space 2 does not utilize a traditional heads-up display to deliver vital information. Rather than cluttering the screen with arbitrary counts, all of the information you need to know is displayed on-screen via a series of in-game indicators.

Foremost amongst the indicators is Isaac's RIG. The RIG is a part of Isaac's suit and provides valuable data via several signals. When all of the lights down Isaac's back are lit and blue, you are in good health. As the lights change to yellow and then red, you are losing health and need to apply Med and use a Med pack to heal yourself before it's too late. On Isaac's right shoulder is your current Stasis recharge. As you use Stasis, this charge decreases. Recharge it with Stasis Packs. Stasis will then recharge slowly over time.

Your ammo is displayed on top of your currently equipped weapon when aiming. When this counter turns orange, you are running low on ammo and should reload. When the counter turns red, your clip is empty and you must reload. Isaac will reload automatically if he has another clip for that weapon. When there are red bars on the top and bottom of the counter, it means you have no more clips in your inventory.

RIG

Activate the RIG (Kinesis Inventory System) to view an in-depth report on your progress and status. You can access the Inventory, Mission, and Database sub-menus from the RIG.

INVENTORY

View your weapons, key items, suit status, number of nodes, and credits from the Inventory. You can use either available or drop items from this menu, as well. Dropped items will appear in the world and can be picked up again if desired.

MISSION

View your current objectives and personal journal. Completed objectives are highlighted in green, while incomplete ones remain blue. Highlight an objective to view further details, when available.

DATABASE

Listen to the audio and video transmissions you have picked up over the course of the game, sorted by chapter.
