Reading Passage

Read the passage carefully before answering the questions that follow.

Moon Interactions

The moon's interactions with Earth determine the varying phases we observe by the relative positions and gravitational forces between celestial bodies. The lunar phases, which include new moon, waxing crescent, first quarter, waxing gibbous, full moon, waning gibbous, last quarter, and waning crescent, are caused by the changing angle between the Earth, Moon, and Sun as the Moon orbits Earth. These phases repeat approximately every 29.5 days, known as the synodic period, which is the time it takes for the Moon to realign with the Sun and Earth in the same relative positions. In contrast, the sidereal period, about 27.3 days, refers to the Moon's orbit relative to distant stars, which is slightly shorter due to Earth's movement around the Sun.

Lunar and solar eclipses occur when the alignment of the Sun, Moon, and Earth is nearly perfect. A lunar eclipse happens during a full moon when Earth passes directly between the Sun and the Moon, casting a shadow on the Moon. A solar eclipse occurs during a new moon when the Moon passes between the Sun and Earth, blocking sunlight partially or fully. These events only happen during specific orbital alignments, which depend on the inclination of the Moon's orbit relative to Earth's orbital plane. The geometry of these phases and eclipses involves precise positioning that allows for these dramatic celestial events.

Tidal forces are another consequence of the moon's gravitational pull. These forces create bulges in Earth's oceans, resulting in high and low tides. When the Sun and Moon are aligned during full and new moons, spring tides occur with higher high tides and lower low tides. Conversely, during the first and last quarter moons, when the Sun and Moon are at right angles relative to Earth, neap tides occur with pronounced tidal bulges. The periodicity and intensity of tides are a direct outcome of the relative positions of Earth, Moon, and Sun, illustrating the complex gravitational interactions within our planetary system.
