

Chromosome Theory of Inheritance

- genes are located on chromosomes & transmission of chromosomes to daughter cells at meiosis accounts for patterns of inheritance that Mendel observed
- genes determine inherited traits
- launched study of genetics (focuses on inheritance of traits)

Heredity inheritance/transmission of traits from parents → offspring
Trait any observable characteristic of individual, ranging from outward appearance

?’s Mendel was trying to answer:

1. Blending Inheritance Hypothesis
 - traits of a mother & father blend together to form traits in their offspring
 - offspring has characteristics that are intermediate btw its mother & father
 - predicted that when black sheep & white sheep mate, their hereditary determinants blend to give offspring w gray wool
2. Inheritance of Acquired Characters Hypothesis
 - traits are modified thru use and then passed on from parents to offspring in modified form
 - predicted that if giraffes extend their necks by straining to reach leaves high in tops of trees, they transmit this acquired trait to produce longer-necked offspring

Model Organism

- species that is used for research cuz it is easy to work w and conclusions drawn from studying it may apply to other species
- peas served as 1st model organism in genetics (2 features of pea that made it possible for Mendel to design exp’s)
 - he could control which parents were involved in a mating
 - individuals were available that differed in easily recognizable traits (flower color, seed shape)

Polymorphic trait when a trait appears commonly in 2 + diff forms (purple/white flowers)

Peas can be Self-Fertilized or Cross-Fertilized

Self-Fertilization <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - garden peas undergo this - flower’s pollen falls on female reproductive organ of same flower 	Cross-Fertilization Mendel could control the matings of his model organism
Mendel could prevent self-fert by removing male reproductive organs from flower before any pollen formed. Later could use a brush to transfer pollen from another pea plant to target flower’s female repro organ

Traits that Mendel studied (7):

- seed shape, seed color, pod shape, pod color, flower color, flower & pod position, stem length
