

The War in the Pacific

Background

In 1941 the United States was still neutral in the war. The attack on Pearl Harbor changed that. The United States entered the war on December 7, 1941.

Early in the Pacific War

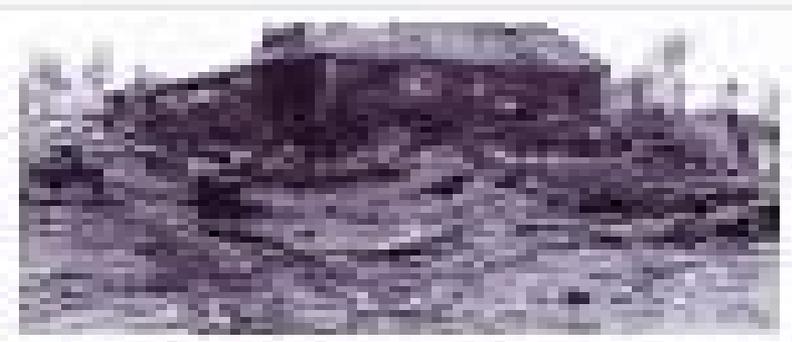

Japan attacked the United States at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. This was a surprise attack. The U.S. Navy was not ready for it.

Turning of the Tide

- Battle of Midway
- Battle of Guadalcanal
- Battle of Iwo Jima
- Battle of Okinawa
- Atomic Bombs
- Surrender of Japan

The Battle of Iwo Jima

The Battle of Iwo Jima was a major battle in the Pacific War. It took place in February 1945. The U.S. Marines fought against the Japanese. The Japanese were trying to hold Iwo Jima as a base for launching attacks on the mainland. The U.S. Marines won the battle. This was a turning point in the war. It showed that the Japanese were losing their ability to hold territory.

The battle was very hard. The Japanese had built a strong defense. They had many tunnels and bunkers. The U.S. Marines had to dig their way through the terrain. They fought for every inch of ground. The battle was a great victory for the U.S. Marines. It showed their courage and determination. The Japanese were forced to surrender. This was a major turning point in the war.

The Allies Show the Japanese Tide

The Allies showed the Japanese tide was turning. The U.S. Navy won the Battle of Midway in June 1942. This was a major victory. It stopped the Japanese from attacking the mainland. The U.S. Army won the Battle of Guadalcanal in November 1942. This was another major victory. It showed that the Japanese were losing their ability to hold territory. The U.S. Marines won the Battle of Iwo Jima in February 1945. This was a final major victory. It showed that the Japanese were losing their ability to hold territory. The war was over.

Chapter 25 Section 3 The War In The Pacific Answer Key:

United States Army in World War II Harry L. Coles, Albert K. Weinberg, 1986 A documentary history with brief narrative introductions illustrating the evolution of civil affairs policy and practice in the Mediterranean and European theaters Most important of all in World War II soldiers became governors in a much broader sense than ever before so much more than was foreseen that the Army's specialized training proved scant preparation for perhaps the most important phase of their role They became not merely the administrators of civilian life for the Army's immediate needs but at the same time the executors and at times even by force of circumstances the proposers of national and international political policy This broader role arose from the fact that in World War II the Allies strove to realize from the very beginning of occupation political aims that had usually not been implemented during war or if during war at all not until active hostilities had ended Thus in enemy countries civil affairs officials were immediately to extirpate totalitarian governmental and economic systems in liberated countries they were as soon as possible to aid in restoring indigenous systems and authorities and in both types of countries they were to make an all out effort to effect gradual transition toward the envisaged postwar national and international order
