

CHAPTER 2

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

INTRODUCTION

A review of literature is a classification and evaluation of what accredited scholars and researchers have written on a topic, organized according to a guiding concept such as a research objective, thesis or the problem / issue to be addressed. It is the scholarly core of the dissertation. It is an analysis and synthesis of the source materials, written in a specific style which flows from broad to narrow and takes into account both the theoretical and empirical issues. The main purpose of the review of literature is to report on original research or experimentation in order to make such information available to the rest of the scholarly world.

According to Best & Kahn (1989), Review of related literature is the summary of writings of recognized authorities and of previous research provides evidence that the researcher is familiar with what is already known and what is still unknown and untested. Since effective research is based upon past knowledge, this step helps to eliminate the duplication of what has been done and provides useful hypotheses and helpful suggestions for significant investigation. Citing studies that show substantial agreement and those that seem to present conflicting conclusions helps to sharpen and define understanding of existing knowledge in the problem area, provides a background for the research project and makes the reader aware of the status of the issue. Only those studies that are plainly relevant, competently executed and clearly reported should be included.

In searching related literature, the researcher should note certain important elements. They are

- Reports of studies of closely related problems that have been investigated.
- Design of the study, including procedures employed and data gathering instruments used.
- Populations that were sampled and sampling methods employed
- Variables that were defined
- Extraneous variables that could have affected the findings
- Faults that could have been avoided
- Recommendations for further research

The studies collected and reviewed are presented under the following headings:
