

Gathering Firewood

Each day a young boy walked through the forest gathering firewood for his family's small shack beside the forest. On one day, the boy saw a bird. The bird was frail and hungry. The boy wished he could feed the bird, but he had nothing. So, he continued walking in the woods until he saw a deer. The deer looked tired and very thirsty. Again, the boy wished he could help the deer, but he had nothing to give him. Deep in the forest, he found an old man. The old man was also attempting to collect firewood. It was clear that the man was weak and struggling to collect enough wood to stay warm. Instantly, the boy gave all of the wood he had collected throughout the forest to the old man. Of course, the old man was very grateful. As a gift, he gave the boy a canteen of water. The boy turned back through the forest and continued collecting wood when he stumbled upon the deer again. Right away, the boy gave the deer the water from the canteen. Happy and energized, the deer gave the boy seeds from the forest as a thank you. The boy knew exactly who could use the seeds, so he went in search of the bird. He found the bird just in time, huddled at the base of an old oak tree. The boy fed the bird the seeds and soon the bird had the energy to move again. Revitalized, the bird gave the boy all the wood it had been collecting for its nest. Soon, the boy's firewood pile was a tower of sticks and twigs in his hands. He knew that he would be able to keep his family warm for many days to come.
