Immigration

Immigration means people moving to a new country. In the United States, immigration has been going on for many years. People from many different countries have moved to the United States to live and work.

Some people come to the United States to find a better life. Some people come to the United States to join family members who are already living there.

Move for Answer

What is a migrant?

People who move from one place to another are called migrants. Many people migrate to find a better life or to join family members who are already living in a new country.

Ellis Island

Ellis Island was a federal island in New York Harbor. It was used as an immigration station for people coming to the United States. Many people who were seeking a better life in the United States came to Ellis Island to start a new life. Some people were accepted for entry into the United States, while others were turned away.

The Statue of Liberty is a symbol of freedom and democracy. It was a gift from France to the United States. The Statue of Liberty stands on Liberty Island in New York Harbor. It is one of the most famous landmarks in the United States.

Tenement

Many people who came to the United States lived in tenement houses. Tenement houses were small, crowded buildings that were often in poor condition. Many people lived in tenement houses because they could not afford to live elsewhere.

Some people who lived in tenement houses were very poor. They often had to share a room with many other people. The conditions in tenement houses were often very unhealthy.

Immigration

People migrated to New York for several different reasons. Many people came to New York City to find a better life. Some people came to New York City to join family members who were already living there.

Many immigrants who came to New York City were welcomed by the people of the United States. However, some immigrants were not welcomed. Some people were turned away from the United States because they did not meet the requirements for entry.
