Three Phase with Phase Loss Monitor LAD

This is a simplified control and power circuit for a three phase motor

When the safety switch is closed, a power source of 480 volts AC is supplied through the fuses to the control transformer and the motor contactor M1

The transformer steps the voltage down to 120 volts AC. Power flows through the stop pushbutton to the normally open start pushbutton

When the start pushbutton is pressed, the M coil becomes energized and the tr contactor contacts close and energize the motor. A locking circuit or latching coil keeps the M coil energized after the start pushbutton is released

Pressing the normally closed stop pushbutton will remove power from the M coil and the motor will be de-energized

The energizing lights receive power through auxiliary contacts on the M contactor

If the OL (overload) control opens, the M coil becomes de-energized and cannot be re-energized until the OL control is closed and the start pushbutton is pressed

If a phase loss occurs the M coil is de-energized and cannot be re-energized until the phase loss is corrected

Click on these 'Actual Links' or click on the actual symbols to interact with the circuit
