

Electrical Safety

ELECTRICITY CAN KILL

Over 1000 accidents at work involving electrical equipment are reported to Health & Safety Executive. 25% of these are fatal. High voltages over 50 volts AC or 120 volts DC are particularly dangerous and can cause serious and permanent injury.

DO THE REGULATIONS REQUIRE?

The Health and safety at Work Act 1974 states that:

Employers are responsible for the safety and health of employees and the public, and of risk from work activities.

The Electricity at Work Regulations 1989 states that:

Electrical systems must be installed in a way that prevents danger.

Employers, employees and the public must ensure that electrical systems are necessary in a safe manner.

Employers and the public must work on, use or maintain electrical equipment in a safe manner.

Electrical equipment used in hazardous environments must be constructed to prevent a secondary dangerous situation.

Only those with competent knowledge or experience or under adequate supervision should work with, or on, electrical equipment that could cause danger.

The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 states that:

Employers must be notified immediately by telephone using the Reporting Line (0800 000000) or via the Health and Safety Executive's Incident form.

ASSESSING THE RISKS

Health and safety risk assessment should take into account the risks associated with electricity.

Risk assessment consists of 4 steps:

- 1) Identifying the hazards.
- 2) Deciding who might be harmed and how.
- 3) Evaluating the risks and deciding on precautions.
- 4) Recording your findings and implementing them.
- 5) Reviewing your risk assessment and updating it if necessary.

Some common risks come from:

- 1) Contact with live parts.
- 2) Electrical faults and the risks are greatest where the equipment contains a heat source.
- 3) Flammable or explosive atmospheres.
- 4) Hazard conditions where unsuitable equipment can easily become hot and can make its surroundings live and dangerous.
- 5) Confined spaces where if an electrical fault develops it will be very difficult to avoid a shock.
- 6) Some of the equipment used in extensive faults and faulted tests which are particularly liable to damage.

For further guidance please see HSE's website www.hse.gov.uk/electrical/

REDUCING THE RISKS FOR EMPLOYERS

Ensure people working on or with electrical equipment or systems are 'competent' for the task.

Ensure the electrical installation:

- Complies to BS 7671 Requirements for electrical installations.
- Is maintained in a safe condition.
- There are enough socket outlets are provided.

Provide safe and suitable equipment:

- Equipment must be suitable for the working environment.
- Consider using air, hydraulic or hand-powered tools in harsh conditions.
- Provide a socket near each fixed machine to cut off power in an emergency.
- Replace damaged sections of cable promptly.
- Special electrical equipment should be used in potentially flammable or atmospheric.
- Consider asking for specialist advice.

Reduce the voltage:

- Temporary lighting can be run at lower voltages.
- Battery-powered tools are safest.
- Portable tools designed to be run from a 110 volt source topped to earth supply are available.

Provide a safety device (an RCD) if equipment operating at 230 volts or higher is used. An RCD is a device which detects some faults in the electrical system and quickly switches off the supply.

REDUCING THE RISKS FOR EMPLOYEES

Visual inspection should also be done by employees.

Work safely:

- Report or faulty equipment must be taken out of use, labeled 'DO NOT USE' and examined by a competent person.
- If possible, lock and place warning notices should be exhibited off before plugging in or unplugging.
- Equipment should be switched off and/or unplugged before fitting or fitting adjustments.

Always ensure cables are in good condition and free when fitting or the same, prevent it from being damaged.

Have overhead electric lines switched off if possible or maintain safe working distance from the lines.

The use of work stopping company must be provided before starting work near electrical systems in harness.
