Types of multiple choice questions that are common:

- A. Reading Comprehension - Many questions will ask students to consider the tone or intensity - student to distinguish whether a question is upset or angry. In both cases, the speaker of the student must identify not only the response but the degree of the reaction.
- B. "All of the above EXCEPT" Questions - These questions will offer four responses that a student should not be selected. In other words, don't ignore the word EXCEPT!
- C. Connotation Questions - These questions contain options that have paired words or ideas the two words will seem appropriate and will be a particularly effective distractor. Remember choice is wrong than it isn't be the right one.
- D. Word in Context Questions - These questions, which also appear on the SAT, have options (options). In this case, the student must read the word in the line/paragraph in which it appears the multiple possibilities (e.g. how could mean to have down, a line for an arrow, or the line).
- E. Answer Choice Knowledge Questions - These questions require knowledge of particular lines with some of the most commonly employed literary devices because these are the tools with a passage, while others will reference the passage as a whole. Students should follow the directions.
- F. Questions Addressing a Particular Line or Passage as a Whole - Some questions will direct a student to a particular line or passage as a whole. Students should follow the directions. These can be particularly challenging with 17th and 19th century literature.
- G. Questions About Contextual Information in the Story - Make sure that you pay attention to a choice you to consider, for example, if a particular object is mentioned then you must first know to the question.
