CELL DIVISION: HOW CELLS MULTIPLY

Have you ever wondered how your body grows or how you heal when you get a cut? It's all thanks to something amazing called cell division.

Write a cell division (important for living things)

Cell division is the process by which a cell divides into two new cells. This is how life stays healthy.

Every living thing is made up of cells. When your body gets a cut, it uses cell division to heal the wound. Without cell division, you wouldn't be able to grow or heal.

During cell division, the cell makes a copy of its DNA and then splits into two new cells.

Not only does cell division happen in our bodies, but it's also happening in plants and animals all the time. When a tree grows taller or a lizard's tail grows back after it's lost, cell division is happening there, too!

Cell division is the process that keeps living things healthy. Without it, we wouldn't be able to grow, heal, or reproduce.
