

MBBS ANATOMY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

1. What are the four primary tissue types found in the human body?

ANSWER—The four primary tissue types found in the human body are:

1. Epithelial Tissue: Epithelial tissue covers the body surfaces, lines various organs and cavities, and forms glands. It is responsible for protection, secretion, absorption, and selective transport of materials. Epithelial tissue is classified into different types based on its structure and function, such as squamous, cuboidal, and columnar epithelium.

2. Connective Tissue: Connective tissue provides support and connects different tissues and organs in the body. It consists of cells dispersed in an extracellular matrix that contains fibers and ground substance. Connective tissue includes a variety of types, such as loose connective tissue, dense connective tissue, adipose tissue, cartilage, bone, and blood.

3. Muscle Tissue: Muscle tissue is specialized for contraction and movement. There are three types of muscle tissue: skeletal muscle, which is attached to bones and responsible for voluntary movement; smooth muscle, found in the walls of hollow organs and responsible for involuntary movements; and cardiac muscle, which makes up the heart and enables its rhythmic contractions.

4. Nervous Tissue: Nervous tissue is involved in the transmission of electrical signals and coordination of bodily functions. It consists of specialized cells called neurons, which transmit impulses, and supporting cells called neuroglia, which provide structural and functional support. Nervous tissue forms the brain, spinal cord, and nerves throughout the body, enabling communication and control of bodily activities.

2. What is the anatomical term for the study of tissues?

ANSWER—The anatomical term for the study of tissues is histology. Histology is the branch of anatomy that deals with the microscopic examination of tissues, including their structure, composition, and function. It involves the use of specialized laboratory techniques to prepare tissue samples for microscopic analysis, allowing the identification and study of different types of cells and their organization within tissues.
