Study Guide

Before Giving Care Component:

- Unusual sights, appearances, behaviors, odors, & noises often indicate an emergency situation
- The least amount of care a person can give to someone who does not give consent is to call 9-1-1.
- The 3 emergency action steps are CHECK – CALL – CARE
- A person should call 9-1-1 when someone is having trouble breathing, unconscious, choking, or in cardiac arrest (heart stops beating).
- An injured person should be moved ONLY when the scene becomes unsafe, you need to reach another person with a more serious injury or illness, or you need to move the person to give emergency care.
- A person can prevent disease transmission by following standard precautions (i.e. – wearing gloves or using a breathing barrier).
- When checking a conscious adult you should state your name, ask for consent, tell the person what you are trained in, and then proceed to ask questions.
- For a person who may be experiencing shock – take steps to make them comfortable, monitor their ABCs, raise their legs about 12 inches to control any external bleeding (unless you suspect any head, neck, or back injury!).
- When checking an unconscious person you would tap the person & shout “ARE YOU OKAY?”

Adult CPR Component:

- Signals for a person who is having trouble breathing include; noisy or painful breathing, unusually deep or shallow breathing, changes in skin color
- When an adult is conscious & choking giving him/her 5 back blows & 5 abdominal thrusts is an effective technique in helping to dislodge an object.
