Chapter Consumer Awareness:

Consumer Awareness and Consumer Protection Parkash Chandel, Shammi Minhas, 2018-07-17 Consumer protection has become the topic of debate at all levels. The reason behind this has been the lack of awareness of consumers and the malpractices of the business world. In order to maximize profits, many businessmen exploit consumers by supplying poor quality goods at higher prices. They adopt unfair trade practices such as adulteration, black marketing, etc. As a result, consumers do not get value for their money. Big business houses use their power for private gain and to the detriment of consumers. Consumers are exposed to physical, environmental, and other hazards. They need to be protected from spurious, duplicate, and adulterated products, pollution of air, water, and noise, and misleading advertising. Consumer protection, however, is only possible if two steps are taken. First is to frame rules, legislations, and set up machinery like courts to assure that laws are implemented in their true spirits. Second is to make the stakeholders aware of such laws so that they might defend themselves when required. Keeping these two steps in mind, this study has been undertaken. It covers the evaluation of consumer protection machinery and assesses the level of awareness of consumers in Himachal Pradesh. A brief outline of the thesis is as below: Chapter I deals with the introduction to consumer protection. It discusses the meaning of consumer protection and consumerism. It also discusses the consumer's rights, needs, and consumer's responsibilities. Chapter II reviews the literature concerning the problem at hand. It also presents a picture of research design formulated for the present research work. It discusses the selection of the problem, importance, scope, objectives, hypotheses, and research methodology of the present study. Finally, the limitations and the future scope of study have been shown. Chapter III discusses consumerism and consumer protection movements at the international and national level. Chapter IV is an attempt to examine various legislations for consumer protection at the international level as well as at the national level in India. Chapter V reviews the frameworks for consumer dispute resolution and redress in India. Chapter VI examines the organizational setup for the consumer protection along with its evaluation in Himachal Pradesh. Chapter VII deals with the analyses of opinion and perception about consumer awareness and consumer alertness with regard to consumer protection. Chapter VIII highlights the summary and major findings of the study. It also explains suggestions to improve the implementation of consumer protection laws and awareness among people.

Products for Conscious Consumers Kemi Ogunyemi, Vanessa Bural, 2022-07-06 Products for Conscious Consumers is a guide for academics, students, and professionals who want to measure and influence responsible consumer behaviour and attain genuine Green Marketing.

Sustainable Practices in the Fashion and Retail Industry Tarnanidis, Theodore, Papachristou, Evridiki, Karypidis, Michail, Manda, Vijaya Kittu, 2025-03-07 Sustainable shopping practices are becoming more prevalent in the fashion and retail industry as consumers demand more ethical and environmentally friendly products. The industry's negative environmental and social impacts are being reduced through these efforts, which often create high levels of waste, pollution, and exploitation.

Technological advancements shifting values and changing economic and environmental conditions are shaping the future of consumer shopping habits. As the impact of consumers on society and the environment grows and digital innovations alter the way people interact with brands, the retail landscape is expected to change significantly. Further exploration of these sustainable practices may provide improved solutions for environmentally conscious fashion and retail businesses. Sustainable Practices in the Fashion and Retail Industry explores the continuing trends of sustainable techniques and practices in the fashion and retail business. It examines how consumer habits are evolving toward more thoughtful, personalized, and technology-driven experiences that align with modern values and lifestyles. This book covers topics such as green marketing, social media, and circular economy and is a useful resource for business owners, policymakers, entrepreneurs, economists, academicians, and researchers.

Routledge Handbook of Consumer Protection and Behaviour in Energy Markets Tina Soliman Hunter, Marcin Kraśniewski, Jurgita Malinauskaite, Marzena Czarnecka, 2024-09-27. The Routledge Handbook of Consumer Protection and Behaviour in Energy Markets provides a comprehensive study of consumer protection and consumer behaviour in selected jurisdictions worldwide. Each chapter is written by experts and provides a contemporary overview of national consumer protection and policy developments in the energy sector. Today, energy has become an essential factor in ensuring the socio-economic development of any country and improving the quality of life of society and is now an essential element of life for everyone. The energy market has become a competitive market based on the assumption that generation and sale of energy is not a natural monopoly and that market mechanisms in particular competition between energy companies are the best way to reduce prices and improve customer service. The purchase of energy is inextricably linked with its distribution from the producer to the purchaser. The book shows that well-functioning energy markets need informed and well-protected consumers who can benefit from competition and transparent offers. They are free to choose the most competitive providers and know their rights with access to effective means of redress. Given that the energy market has a specific technical nature, the book analyses the energy market within the scope of free market principles with a focus on the protection of the weaker party to the contract, the consumer. In addition, consumers can also play an active part of the clean energy transition.

Effects of Air Pollutants on Textile Fibers and Dyes J. B. Upham, V. S. Salvin, 1975. A Hypothetical Enhanced Renewable Energy Utilization (EREU) Model for Electricity Generation in Thailand. Thomas Andexer, 2008. Master's Thesis from the year 2008 in the subject Environmental Sciences, grade Passed, Assumption University of Thailand, College of Internet Distance Education, CIDE School of Business Administration course. Master Thesis Project. 100 entries in the bibliography, language English, abstract. This thesis presents a research project entitled A Hypothetical Enhanced Renewable Energy Utilization (EREU) Model for Electricity Generation in Thailand. This research is motivated by Thailand's rapidly increasing electricity consumption caused by the country's long-standing above-average economic growth. Consequently, the rising electricity demand can only be satisfied by continuously growing electricity imports.

and thus creating a significant burden to Thailand's national budget. Furthermore, Thailand is heavily dependent on natural gas reserves for electricity generation; however, these are expected to be depleted within only three decades, and global price levels for conventional fuels are increasingly volatile with an ascending tendency as well. Therefore, Thailand faces an urgent need to strategically plan for the broad utilization of domestic renewable energy resources, which is essential for a more diversified and thus sustainable electricity generation, as well as for the nation's endeavor to become an energy hub within the South East Asian region. Under these circumstances, this research conducts a comprehensive literature review regarding the past development as well as the current situation of renewable energy utilization in Thailand, which concludes in the identification of the importance of renewable energy in the given context and closes with both a distinctive needs assessment and a conceptual framework for Thailand's future renewable energy strategy. Subsequently, the research introduces a unique primary research endeavor in the form of an explorative expert interview survey, which succeeds in a substantial collection of qualitative and in-depth

Food Marketing. Influence of organic and domestic claims Syed Asad Ali Naqvi, 2021-09-09 Master's Thesis from the year 2019 in the subject Business economics Review of Business Studies grade 1 3 Technical University of Munich language English abstract This thesis explains the relative significance of product claims in food product marketing. Eggs are selected as the appropriate product for evaluating the importance of animal welfare and product origin claims. For illustration purposes, this study uses qualitative data for the top four egg-producing countries in Europe: France, Germany, the U.K., and Italy. This data is acquired from Mintel GNPD. After the hierarchical clustering technique has been applied, European egg consumers are divided into five groups: premium consumers, product-centric consumers, indifferent consumers, fair consumers, and local consumers. Substantial differences have been found in the preferences of product claims for each cluster. This thesis attempts to make three contributions to existing research by analyzing product claims for eggs. Firstly, this study demonstrates the importance of product origin claims in marketing. Secondly, it explains different aspects of animal welfare that are relevant for European consumers when purchasing eggs. Finally, it makes recommendations to policy makers for increasing consumer engagement and helps egg suppliers in Europe in developing international marketing strategies.
